In this self-portrait, which could have been subtitled "From AIDS to Global Warming", the artist links his past choreographies to his encounters, infatuations, doubts, and commitments.

Seated facing the audience, alone in front of his computer, Jérôme Bel retraces almost thirty years of work. He reconstructs the logic and the sometimes unconscious driving forces, matching film archives, gestures, and biographical facts. Here, he tells his own story for the first time, shedding light on what makes a work: the friction between questions about theatre and dance, politics, and private life.
